

AMERICENTER

About AmeriCenter

When I conceived of AmeriCenter, the goal was to bridge the differences we see growing daily in our divided country. It is upsetting for us to see the American people look for ways to segment themselves – and create differences to identify by.

AmeriCenter is not a political endeavor. The clear goal is to use “the path of least resistance” through simple mechanisms to get people to unite. In our opinion, the level of sophistication of recent technologies is only harboring further division. We want to avoid that.

Ideally, what is starting as a simple webpage and website – will advance into the physical world. After all, we can only live so much of our lives online.

What we would like to eventually see are: meetups, conferences, group meals, and other ways for Americans to meet and enjoy the shared experience of America. These gatherings will ideally set the tone for a renewed American spirit of shared prosperity and understanding.

Lastly, one of America’s core values and virtues is the spirit and mission of volunteerism. I recommend this as a first step in the process of uniting. I would visit: (<https://www.volunteer.gov/>) for great options, or the Salvation Army’s website (<https://www.salvationarmyusa.org/volunteer/>), or The Red Cross’ website (<https://www.redcross.org/volunteer/become-a-volunteer.html>), or Feeding America’s website (<https://www.feedingamerica.org/take-action/volunteer>).
